President's Message

Inspiration Comes From Many Places

Pam Doolittle

The Onset of Spring is Inspiring

Over the last week at our Hidden Pond Farm, we've welcomed back our resident cranes, a few robins and even the blue birds! I hope you are also enjoying signs of spring in your own neighborhoods. I've decided to embrace the mud for now. Maybe by now you are seeing the crocuses blooming in your gardens? I sure hope so!

A Tragedy Turns into Inspiration

March 3 marked the one-year anniversary of Courtney King-Dye's fall from a young horse resulting in a severe brain injury that has changed her life. She keeps a blog on her progress and has begun stepping out publicly to share her experience. She was recently a featured guest on Robert Dover's radio show, where she spoke eloquently, honestly and candidly about the accident, her recovery and her plans for the future.* Although recovering from the accident has been very hard, she is glad that it has inspired a national wave of consciousness for improving safety for all riders. One notable change is the USEF helmet rule, which went into effect for dressage and event riders at the beginning of the year.

The WDCTA State board has embraced the helmet rule as well. Starting in 2011, for any WDCTA state- or chapter-sponsored event, all riders must wear an ASTM/SEI approved helmet at all times while mounted. So please remember, members, as you pack for the shows, events, clinics and mounted programs this year: Don't forget your helmets. Even these international riders wear helmets. Check out these two interviews with Guenter Seidel and Debbie McDonald about their helmet use.

Other People's Journeys Inspire

I received a lot of feedback from members about the March president's message, where I discussed The Dressage Foundation's Century Club and shared some fond memories about my experiences in Germany and lessons learned with Colonel Albrecht Von Ziegner.

Thanks to everyone for your emails and phone calls! Our annual meeting was really the inspiration for the text. JJ Tate articulated so well all she's learned from her mentor, Charles de Kunffy as well as other notable trainers including Scott Hassler, Oded Shimoni, Conrad Schumacher and Gerhard Politz. She was the one who got me thinking about the Colonel. She did such a fantastic job helping participants reflect on what inspires each of us to ride and learn, and encouraged all of us get out there and start living our dreams.

I've heard from several members who attended expressing how worn out they had been feeling due to the cold and snowy winter. They left the meeting inspired and trekked straight to the barn that week to get back to work with their horses. JJ would be very proud!

This newsletter should help summarize the event for those of you who couldn't join us. Special congratulations are in order to all our WDCTA awards winners.

I was able to share the March eQuester with the Colonel shortly after it was published. He replied in an email, saying, in part, "I enjoyed your message very much. It's good to hear of you. The article in the March edition of eQUESTER makes me feel good. What a beautiful magazine. It reminds me of wonderful times. I'll never forget the lovely Pony Club activities at the Schultheis farm as well as your times as a working student at our school."

He went on to share details of how life is going in Mechtersen, including that his mare, now 7, continues to develop the way he would like and "it makes me feel happy every day."

I share this for a few reasons: First, to take this opportunity to congratulate our newsletter editor, Caryn Vesperman, on the international "debut" and positive review of the publication she organizes! But secondly, if you still find yourself stuck in those late winter blues, please find inspiration in the words of this master, who still finds happiness in riding and training every day — at 93 years old!

Forward, calm and straight into spring, members. We're almost there!!

Note:

Pam Doolittle, nominated along with two other well-deserving members, was voted by the WDCTA state board as the 2010 Member of the Year.

Congratulations, Pam!

On the Bit

Caryn Vesperman, editor

It's been a long winter! The last month has been especially challenging, and it's taken all my energy just to make that "long" trek from the back door to the barn — an entire 125 feet.

But in the last month, I traveled to Phoenix for work and while the rest of my colleagues traveled back, I took a day of vacation and spent a long weekend with my mom.

Now the reason for the interesting photo for this column is in my last two trips to Phoenix, I have managed to fit in two departures from riding dressage.

The photo shows me, sans helmet and proper riding boots, at the end of a desert trail ride. I really liked my horse. I wanted to bring him home for trail rides of my own and perhaps to even coax my husband to climb aboard. Unfortunately the cowboy turned down my offer. I say, "cowboy," because not only was he wearing a cowboy hat, jeans, boots and the big silver belt buckle, but he was "packing." When I asked him why the gun, thinking he needed it because we might come across some threatening coyotes, bobcats or even a poisonous snake, he replied, "Because I can." Interesting difference between a trail ride in southern Wisconsin and the Arizona desert!

My recent Phoenix trip inspired a ride of the mechanical kind.

Cheered on by my work colleagues, I rode a mechanical bull! I think the dude operating the controls was a little kind to me, but I was proud of a couple of things.

First, everyone else needed a boost up onto the mechanical bull. I just hopped up. (But note: I did not tell the operator that I actually rode horses, especially young, unpredictable ones, because I didn't want him to really give me the ultimate bull ride. I've seen how those mechanical bulls can be made to whip around!)

The second "proudest" moment, if you can describe such a moment on a mechanical bull as "proud," was that when the bull did whip around, I slid way down one side, barely hanging on. In spite of my laughing so hard that I could hardly breathe, I managed to crawl back to the top of the bull and continue the ride. (I more than made the eight seconds.) It was a hoot, and I'd do it again.

The point of my telling you these stories? To encourage you to get outside your comfort zone! Try riding a horse trained in a different discipline. Besides trail riding in the desert and bull riding, I've ridden a 5-gaited Saddlebred and Paso Finos. It was fun — and their special gaits (like the Saddlebred's rack) helped me really feel what what lateral gaits feel like, which will help my dressage. So try something different, even....ride a mechanical bull.

While we all are passionate about dressage, I have to say, life's too short to spend all our time in the dressage ring!

WDCTA Annual Conference and Awards Banquet

Dance, yoga, martial arts, shopping, awards, camaraderie and JJ Tate, an inspiring guest speaker. This and more was what everyone experienced at the WDCTA Annual Conference and Awards Banquet in February at the Holiday Inn & Suites, Madison.

Enjoy the photos on the next few pages. These are compliments of our WDCTA member and our wonderful artist-photographer, Heather McManamy of ShortHorse Studio. Visit her website for more photos from this special event.

Trainer, international FEI competitor, speaker and overall nice person ...

JJ Tate

Born and raised in Wisconsin, JJ Tate moved to the east coast several years ago to pursue her dream of representing the United States on a team.

She is well on her way, representing the U.S. at the World Breeding Championships for Young Dressage Horses in Verden, Germany; finishing as a World Cup finalist; making the long list for the World Equestrian Games; and earning FEI High Point at the Winter Equestrian Festival in Wellington.

At the WDCTA conference, JJ focused her talk on being engaged, both mentally and physically. She practices being aware and present in the moment so she occupies the attention of all involved, including her horse.

As she does herself, she recommends setting short- and long-term goals. She talked about her goals early on of earning her silver medal in five to eight years, and now her goal is to be on an Olympic and World Equestrian Games team.

The next step, she says, is to set an action plan including a daily riding plan. Then, make the commitment.

"This is the most important part of the engagement," she says. "A lack of commitment leads to a lack of consistency and confidence."

She also says people try to do too much multi-tasking. "You need to escape when you're on your horse. Block it all out."

JJ is a very upbeat person and says she always tries to think positively and not focus on the negative. She believes the brain doesn't really differentiate between the real and the imagination, so she practices riding in her imagination -- and says to remember to "practice riding in the positive."

A great comment JJ made was: "Ride with purpose and on purpose."

Footnote: Since the annual banquet, JJ Tate has become engaged to Richard Malmgren, sales and marketing representative, Hassler Dressage. The two met when JJ was training with Scott Hassler more than 1- 1/2 years ago See The Chronicle of the Horse website.

It's all in your mind. In a nearby room, attendees practice the positions, body control and the relaxation techniques of yoga, including Pam Erlanger (far right, lower corner). Session led by Marina Koyen of Bliss Flow Yoga.

< Don't mess with her! Becky Bebbler-Wells demonstrates a kick-box move in the martial arts break-out session. In the back row, Stephanie Severn (left) and other session attendees get a kick out of the session too. Session led by Bonnie Friscino, a student of karate for nearly 20 years and has earned her third black belt in Tae Kwon Do.

Givin' it a Whirl! Budding Fred Astaires and Ginger Rogers learned a few steps of dances such as the rhumba. Front, L-R: Karin Steffens, Dan Doolittle and Donna Rose. This session was led by Eric Gullitzer, who along with his wife, Deborah, compete professionally and own Dance on Air Studios in Fitchburg.

This just in: JJ Tate is leaving her dressage career to take on the modeling runway. Not really, but thanks to Kim Armani of Midwest English Tack, not only was the shopping terrific at her booth (above right), but she supplied the outfits for our models which not only included JJ (top left) but also Cassandra Doolittle (right) who had on some really cool "blue jeans" breeches. (Editor's note: Must get a pair of those!) And, as in other years, the silent auction (below) brought out the competitive nature in all as the clock ticked down to the final Thanks again to Midwest English Tack for underwriting some of our spectacular awards. Besides the gorgeous ribbons (page background), this year's awards were navy fleece jackets for championships; saddle pads for reserve; leather halters with award name plates for in-hand and USEF young/developing horse. The Greg Foran musical kur award was a jewelry box with hand-painted photo of the winner and her horse.

DRESSAGE CLINIC WITH TOM POULIN

With a focus on the 2011 tests

Tom Poulin has been an influential member of the American dressage community longer than many riders today have been alive. In his lengthy career, he has been recognized as a top rider, trainer, USEF "S" judge, instructor, and clinician, and is one of the driving forces behind the development of dressage as a sport in the United States. As his clients and students can affirm, when seeking a professional that can realize the potential of both horse and rider, there is no substitute for experience.

Riders may choose to ride an entire test for Mr. Poulin to judge and score, or may work on test movements at their level.
