President's Message

To Do's and More To Do's!

Pam Doolittle

Members and friends, where did the summer go? It's hard to believe that in less than one month, the University of Wisconsin campus will be a beehive of activity with new and returning students relearning how to navigate the traffic patterns and pathways to their classes.

Usually, this means an end to the summer show and clinic season for me. Longer work hours, plus all the after school activities with my own kids, fill my days and weekends. Stealing away for a ride on my own horses starts to feel more and more like a guilty pleasure, especially as the days get shorter and the nights a little crisper. Sound familiar?

If You Want Something Done, Ask a Busy Person

I know we all struggle with our own versions of "busy." Even professional trainers and dressage judges, who may work with horses and students daily, are working to fit it all in. Our organization is successful thanks to the extra hours put in by our dedicated volunteers, who in addition to their jobs, family commitments, their own hobbies and horses, find time to dedicate to advancing the WDCTA mission.

From the newly designed website to our revitalized newsletter, volunteers have done amazing work in improving our communication tools to make navigating them easier and more accessible to you.

Our awards program is organized this year by a volunteer from the Southwest chapter. Schooling shows, such as the ones offered by the Kettle Moraine Chapter, are organized and operated completely by a volunteer crew.

Just this summer, WDCTA offered clinics by fantastic instructors, including Tom Poulin, Janet Foy and Maryal Barnett—again, all run by dedicated volunteers. And, chapters plan educational programs covering a variety of topics, from a panel of riders who participated in the Young

Horse classes, to a pot luck luncheon where folks simply brought their favorite summer selection. Your chapter officers—all volunteers—are largely responsible for planning the next event in your area.

To all who have contributed, I want to say a very big THANK YOU! We couldn't do it without your dedication and support!

Brother, Can You Spare Some Time?

To continue our good work, we need member input. Here are just a few of the ways you can contribute:

- 1.) Take a look at our proposed new bylaws posted online and share your input with me or your chapter president.
- 2.) Attend chapter business meetings.

Late-Breaking News!

A national video training company will be partnering with us at the Steffen Peters/Janet Foy "On The Levels" Symposium.

The video company has indicated it wants to work with WDCTA on our educational events — which means this event and some of our future events will be available to an international audience.

More details in the September issue of the eQuester. Stay tuned!

3.) Find inspiration by participating in some of the chapter educational programs!

4.) Write an article or poem, or share a fun photo with members in our newsletter. Submit to newletter@wdcta.org.

Possible Upcoming Event Ideas

Last month I shared that the WDCTA state board is interested in organizing a USDF nationally recognized educational program, such as the L Education Program or the Instructor Certification Program. Our idea is to rotate these sessions through the chapters, so that the program will be accessible to all members throughout the state.

Based on some member feedback, it seems I might have missed the mark a little in describing what these programs will bring to Wisconsin. Even though these programs are taught by USDF faculty, who are themselves licensed officials and judges, they are geared toward training and the training scale. Part 1 of the L Education program, for example, is open to anyone interested in learning more about correct biomechanics and how the dressage tests and figures are tied into evaluating the training of the horse. Only Part 2 of this program is geared to those interested in becoming a judge.

In addition, while the instructor certification program is a curriculum for improving the toolbox of a riding instructor, for the auditor it is very much like watching a clinic focused on teaching, with the specific goal of improving by using the training scale.

In order to bring these programs to Wisconsin, we need your help! Please let your chapter presidents know you are interested, and even better, offer your time, input and support.

What's in Store for the Rest of 2011? A Lot!

WDCTA still has plenty to offer for the remainder of the year. Our calendar is full with lots of dressage shows and even a few events! Of course, in November, the Southwest Chapter is proud to bring you "Through the Levels" with Steffen Peters and Janet Foy. Steffen Peters and Ravel have been shining stars in Europe, declared by the online magazine, Eurodressage, as the "King of the Kur" for the Freestyle event at Aachen. Plus, Janet Foy is an international dressage judge with a new book being published yet this year. Hope to see you there!

I want to close this message by congratulating WDCTA member, Katie Foster, for representing Region 2 at the North American Junior/Young Rider Championships so well. Back in July, she was ranked fourth in the country. At the Junior/Young Rider Championships, she placed eighth in Team test with a 66.789%, qualifying for the freestyle, where she placed seventh with a 66.2% a few days later. This is a spectacular accomplishment. I'm very proud to know one of Wisconsin's own is doing such great things in our sport. Go Katie and Sacramento!

Step on It!

The photo to the right is of the commemorative brick placed in the patio at the United States Dressage Federation's national office at the Kentucky Horse Park, Lexington, Kentucky. WDCTA purchased the brick during the USDF's fundraising effort several years ago to help pay for its new building. Check it out the next time you visit the USDF office.

Galloping While Sitting on Your Horse's Neck is Over-rated

In past columns, I have encouraged you to try something new, something outside the dressage ring, with your horse. Based on my recent experience, I can recommend crossing one thing off your list.

It was early evening a few weeks ago. My horses and I had spent the weekend working hard in a clinic with Alex Gerding, the trainer I bring in six to eight times a year. I tacked Sally up after a long day in the office, thinking a trail ride would be a perfect way to end the day.

We were on a narrow trail in the woods on my neighbor's property, when we came upon a branch that had blown down during a recent wind storm and was laying across the trail.

While Sally was suspicious of it, I thought, "No problem, it's lower than a cavaletti. Sally will just step over it and we'll continue on our way." Unfortunately, Sally caught it with her hind foot, and – horrors – its dried leaves rustled threateningly.

She bucked and I found myself flung forward and now sitting on her neck while galloping down the trail.

It is amazing how much goes through your mind in such a short time. I thought:

1. I can't turn sharply to stop her because there are trees on both sides of the trail.
2. I might fall off.
3. Where am I going to fall off, and will I avoid flying into a tree?
4. If I fall off, Sally is most likely going to gallop all the way home, step on the reins and wreck my nice bridle.
5. I don't want to walk home.
6. Sally might get hurt running off.
7. I might get hurt if I fall off.
8. I wonder if Mark is home yet from work. Will he find my crumpled body in the woods?
9. Sally's not slowing down. I wonder how much longer she will keep galloping?
10. I'm glad we're on a narrow, tree-lined trail because she can't veer off, which would certainly cause me to fall off.
11. Hmm, it's really not that uncomfortable riding on a horse's neck. A bit precarious, but not uncomfortable.
12. Wow, I'm still on.
13. I bet I wouldn't be if I was on one of my young horses.
14. She's not slowing down. Caryn, you better figure something out.

At that point, I put my hands on her neck and heaved myself up and backwards, hoping I'd land back in the saddle.

Fortunately the plan worked, which gave me the leverage to put the brakes on. I got her stopped, and then we continued the trail ride as if nothing had happened. I've had some heart-pounding moments in the saddle, but the odd thing was, this wasn't one of them. It was more of a now-what-am-I-going-to-do-to-get-out-of-this situation.

So, while I still advocate getting out of the dressage ring, I'd recommend sticking to the traditional method of riding on your horse's back.

Note: Volunteering to help out on a WDCTA event isn't nearly as harrowing as galloping on your horse's neck. (Don't you love how I worked that in?!)

Do you have any humorous, odd or heart-pounding experiences you'd like to share? Send them to in and I'll share them in the newsletter with members. (I'll even honor an anonymous posting, if you don't want to admit it happened to you!)

Lessons with Janet Foy: Interviews with the Riders

Photos and interviews by Diane Brault

WDCTA's primary mission is to foster the dressage education of its members. To further that goal, WDCTA provides numerous opportunities for its members to participate in such activities as symposia, schooling shows, lectures, a library of books and videos, and lessons given by nationally known instructors including Tom Poulin, Janet Foy and Maryal Barnett.

In June, I audited a day of the clinic with International FEI judge, Janet Foy, sponsored by the Southwest Chapter. Janet has been working with WDCTA members four to five times a year for more than seven years. I took some snapshots and interviewed some of the riders. For those of you who haven't yet participated in any of Janet's or Maryal's lessons, I hope this article gives you a flavor of the depth and breadth of the learning that takes place at these lessons!

And remember, if you're not able to actually ride in any upcoming lessons, as a WDCTA member, you may audit them for free! Check the WDCTA web site for the schedule for the remainder of the year.

Following is a question-and-answer column from the July clinic with Janet Foy:

Many riders have been impressed with Janet's seemingly endless "bag of strategies." Whatever the issue may be, Janet has a number of ideas for reaching the goal. She has the patience and knowledge to help riders work through a variety of strategies until one is found that does the trick!

Janet Foy

Kate Van Sicklen and Molly

Mary Hanneman and Phil

Mary McSweeney and Summer

Diane:
"What is one thing you'll take home from today's lesson?"

Kate Van Sicklen:
"My change in position when doing the zig-zags at the canter. Getting my weight changed back and forth quickly enough to help Molly move her shoulders back and forth."

Diane:
"Any other thoughts about today?"

Kate:
"The value of having a person on the ground, watching what you are doing!"

Diane:
"What is one thing you will take away from today's lesson?"

Mary McSweeney:
"Janet helped me to deal better with my horse's resistance and temper tantrums. My mare's got a real temper, and Janet helped me figure out how to control her resistance and transitions without causing a temper tantrum to occur."

Diane:
"Any other thoughts about today?"

Mary M.:
"As an event rider, I find Janet great to work with because she understands our goals and how to reach them."

Diane:
"What concepts will you take home from your lesson with Janet?"

Mary Hanneman:
"I have to concentrate on increasing Phil's hind leg activity in the cater pirouette. One tool to help with that in training is to have a whip in each hand to tap him."

Diane:
"Any other comments about today's lesson?"

Mary H.:
"Phil and I have been working with Janet since training level and she's really helped us get through some sticky spots over the years."

Janet Foy clinic continued

Diane:

“Sue, is there anything you’d like to share regarding working with Janet?”

Sue:

“Janet’s approach to young horses is very specific to each horse’s disposition and needs. Her approach can be totally different depending on the individual horse. She also knows just how much to have you ask of your horse.”

Diane

“Anything else you’d like to share about today’s lesson?”

Haley:

“I loved it when Janet said Allie’s canter was lovely! My mom loved it when Janet told me, ‘Listen to your mother!’ “

-Sue Genin and Romeo

Karen McKean and Middy Delite

Haley Madden and Allouette

Diane:

“What is one thing you remember from this lesson?”

Haley:

“My body position: Keeping my ribs, shoulders and weight even. Correcting that made Allie more balanced, correct and rhythmic. Now I have lots of homework to work on.”

Diane:

“What is something you will take home from today’s lesson?”

Caryn Vesperman:

“When starting to collect my horse at a canter, I can sit lighter and not fall behind the vertical. I can ‘fluff him up’ with my leg. Also, I can better clarify my walk request with firmer legs.”

Diane:

“Any other thoughts about working with Janet?”

Caryn:

“I appreciated Janet’s comment that sometimes young horses whose spark, spirit, sensitivity and forward mentality sometimes means some challenging training moments, but can produce brilliance for you later on, whereas youngsters that are calm and quiet may not have the personality to be brilliant in the upper levels.”
